

Hosoo

Hosoo sings and plays traditional Mongolian songs, explains the contents of the songs and tells the audience about the history and technique of this fascinating music. HOSOO was born into a family of khoomei singers and grew up in the home of khoomei singing, the province of Chandman Sum in Khovd. This province lies in the Altai mountain region of Western Mongolia.

Hosoo's family sang khoomei during his childhood in an ensemble of thirty from their village.

Hosoo is called a master of khoomei even throat singing. The specificity of this technique is that the singer simultaneously produces two notes: a long-drawn buzzing tone, over which the melody rises to great heights. It can be sung as many as three-part harmonies.

Hosoo has been practising khoomei since he was seven, so he has been involved with this art of singing for over twenty years.

Hosoo was awarded the title of "Best Mongolian Singer" in Ulan Bator.

Hosoo & Transmongolia

The music of Hosoo Transmongolia gives nature a voice

Mongolia. The steppe country in Central Asia stands for unspoiled nature, nomadic life, yurts made of felt, the seemingly endless expanse of the steppe, the Gobi Desert, the Altai Mountains.

The wind blows, hoofbeats resound and the steppe awakes

The degree to which the wandering nomads, their herds of sheep, the horses and camels, the winds and clouds, the mountains and grass are bound with music and song is shown by Hosoo Transmongolia in a very vivid and lively manner. After all, music is still part of life there and an expression of a joyfully respectful joie de vivre.

A musical journey to the immensely vast grassland where people and camels weep together.

In the course of the centuries khoomei developed from the inner love of nature of the nomads in Mongolia. The animals, particularly camels and horses, the rivers and mountains, the winds of the steppes and deserts are sung about and imitated by khoomei singers. The result is true singing with and in nature.

Hosoo Transmongolia gives nature a voice and brings the expanse of the steppe to the concert hall.

Memories Of My Homeland

Transmongolia
Memories Of My Homeland
2007 - Own production

My Mongolia is where I am at home in this world. A home like a horse galloping towards you from a far.

Gesang des Himmels

Transmongolia
Gesang des Himmels
2005 Own production

Allow yourself to be transported by the beautiful sound of Hosoo's music recounting ancient times.

